

More Artists Announced for Old Settler's Music Festival

Blue-eyed soul, grumble punk boogie and the sometimes seriously silly join the Old Settler's lineup. That's James Hunter, Dirtfoot & Steve Poltz in that order.

Grammy-nominated James Hunter takes you back to the '60's with his slinky, soul blues that conjures up images of Sam Cooke and Jackie Wilson. Here's high praise from Van Morrison: "James Hunter is one of the best voices and best kept secrets in British R'n'B and Soul. Check him out." Look for his new record - the first in five years - in February.

Old Settler's Music Festival takes place Thur-Sun, April 18-21 at the Salt Lick Pavilion & Camp Ben McCulloch.

Self-described "Gypsy, Punk, Country, Grumble Boogie," Dirtfoot puts on an uproarious show. Featuring instruments ranging from an acoustic guitar, banjo, upright bass, pots n' pans, drums, bells, saxophone, and beancan shakers, this band has a truly engaging and eclectic sound.

But you have not experienced true entertainment until you sit in the audience at one of Steve Poltz's shows. The former singer from The Rugburns (Mercury Records) is best known for his hilarious storytelling and witty personality, defying all traditional definitions in the songwriting genre.
